PATENT NO.   : 6,994,271 B2
APPLICATION NO. : 10/667292
DATED   : February 7, 2006
INVENTOR(S)   : Jim Tarara et al.

It is certified that error appears in the above-identified patent and that said Letters Patent is hereby corrected as shown below:

Title page item (75), line 1, under Inventors, "James Tarara, Eagan, MN" should be --James Tarara, Woodbury, MN--

Col. 5, Line 27, after "as well" insert the following --as a screen, series of lights, speaker or other sych method of output. In this manner, the user interface 372 allows for input from the user and provides output to the user.

In the illustrated embodiment, the time/date control 375 provides current time and date and measures duration of time. The data store 380 may comprise any type of conventional memory such as, for example, volatile and/or non-volatile memory, to store and allow access to a plurality of parameters associated with the operation of the automated chemical application system 300. A Table 1 below provides exemplary parameters that may be stored in data store 380. Many of these parameters are further defined in the description below. The parameters provided in Table 1 are by way of example only, and other parameters are also possible. Furthermore, not all of the parameters are required to implement an embodiment of the present invention.--

Col. 5, Line 65, after "distribution may be manually" insert the following --activated and deactivated, and certain functional parameters may be manually--

Col. 6, Line 3, after "with a plurality of" insert the following --add-on components that can be used with the automated chemical application system 300. For example, one such add-on component includes a moisture sensor positioned within the target 313 to provide feedback to the automated chemical application system 300 as to the water content of the target 313. In this manner, the mixture application amount can be tailored to maximize the benefits to the target 313.--
